Strangle Hold the Only One Barred Prior to Recent Tourney in This City.

By CHARLES F. MATHISON.

When Strangler Lewis was compelled to forego the use of his head lock in his match with Zbyszko and thereby lost a fall, not only was he handicapped but it opened the way for him to suggest that all the other holds perfected by various grapplers should be barred. If this were done, and in simple justice to Lewis there is no loyical according tice to Lewis there is no logical escape from such contention. Earl Caddock, the soldier wrestier, would be deprived of the use of his favorite head scissors, the application of which is shown in accompanying picture. Caildock is the pressure on the victim's head locking his legs about the unfortunate man's cranium. Then with a wrist hold the victim is gradually wrist hold the victim is gradually pressed to the mat.

The viselike grip of Caddock's tegs on the head of his opponent is an effective bar to any resistance from the upper part of an opponent's body and a bridge cannot long be maintained.

As the man's head is subjected to the crushing impact of Caddock's legs the result is to daze the victim and make him very unsteady, if he is lucky enough to break away from the lock.

Lom to Caddock.

Therefore it can be seen that with-out the use of his head scissors Caddock would be at as great a disadvantage as Lewis minus his head lock. It is true that the head scissors is more difficult to apply than the head lock, and must of necessity be taken while the men are on their knees or while maneuvring on the mat for an

Very seidom does a wrestler succeed in breaking the body scissors when once it has been securely taken, and cases f broken ribs have been numerous where misguided victims of the hold per-ing subjected to the pressure for several minutes, managed to break away and gain his feet. But he tottered about the stage, and Lewis with a panther-like spring again put on the lock and withduck his convent in the lock and bdued his opponent in short order.

As between the head lock and the acissors the former is less apt to pro-duce serious injury, although its effects for the time being are quite as severe.

The Victors Toe Hold.

The toe hold, which was used frequently by the late Frank Gotch, now - the favorite hold of Zbyszko, who hied John Olin with it in their Madison Square Garden contest. Despite the fact that Gotch employed the fold it has nothing to recommend it. Twist-ing a man's foot till he surrenders as a result of the pain or fear of a broken ankle is about the meanest possible ankle is about the meanest possible node of stack. It is decidedly more brutal than the head lock or scissors hold, and if any grip is deserving of elimination the toe hold is the one. Not

FAMOUS WRESTLING HOLDS AND GRAPPLERS WHO HAVE PERFECTED THEM.

This was demonstrated in the match at Des Moines between Caddock and Zbyszko, for when the Pole reached his feet after getting out of the head scissors he was so shaky on his pins that he toppied over and falling on the Iowan knocked him senseless, thus gaining a fail.

Caddock gained the first fail with the head scissors, which is described by a ringsider as follows:

"The fail came with such suddenness that the spectators were hardly prepared for it. For an hour and twenty minutes Caddock had been the most on the offensive, but all attempts to get a hold on the arms ar shoulders of the other were unavailable against the Pole's mightly strength.

"Then suddenly, like a fash, Earl reversed his attack. He switched from the use of his arms to the use of his legs and clamping the latter about the head of the big fellow and aided by a wrist lock he turned him on his shoulders and held them pinned against the mat."

Is a difficult hold to obtain its use is limited.

Up to the time that Lewis was denied the use of the head lock the only hold that was generally taboo was the strangle that was generally taboo was the strangle to be chied which was used by Evan Lewis, the Chieago wrestler.

Owing to the case with which a throat hold could be obtained, and its exhausting and frequently fatal effects, it was decided by the grappling fraternity to bar it.

None of the grips now in use is so dangerous as the strangle, and if there is to be elimination action in that direction should be generally taboo was the exhausting the left case.

All the signs along the trail read that there will be a pronounced military flavor to the track meets during the coming outdoor athlette season. The University of Pennsylvania has blazed while maneuvring on the mat for an effective grip.

Sad indeed would be the predicament of Joe Stecher if forbidden the use of his rib crushing body scissors. If Stecher ever gained a fall from a formulable opponent without the use of the body scissors the fact has been overlooked.

For more than an hour Stecher tussied with Yussif Hussane in Madison Square Garden and never got within hailing distance of a fall until he finally encircled the Turk's waist with his less

Willard Cannot Avoid Bout With Fulton or Dempsey

Champion Will Have to Defend Title or Retire-Up-State Boxing Promoters Hostile to McCue Bill

Jess Willard, the tailest circus man that ever held the beavyweight championship, after much fullic oratory at last has been pinned down to an undertaking the fulfilment of which he cannot escape without the loss of the last shred of public respect.

The champion has publicly announced that he will box ten rounds with the will box ten rounds with the winner of a content between Prace Fulton and Jack Dempsey, and as a bout between these leading contenders for the honors will be staged in May, it does not appear that Willard can avoid meeting the winner in July.

Should the champion attempt to wrizgle out of a hattle with the man who is declared victor of the Fulton and Dempsey bout, Willard would made himself unpopular with the public when he Differe From Sullivan.

Willard's declaration that he can get more money for boxing ten rounds in the East than he can for fighting live rounds in the West, and that he is not in the boxing game for his health, discloses the selfish attitude of the man. Unless he quickly changes his manner Jess eventually will become the exact antithesis of John L. Sullivan, who was the most popular champion in the history of pugitlem.

It would be an excellent idea for the promoters of the Fulton-Dempsey match, which doubtlers will take place in Milwaukee, to appoint three experts to judge the points, and if the bout goes the limit of ten rounds let the selection of the opponent for Willard hinge on the verdict of the judges.

On the form shown by both Fulton and Dempsey the bout should prove to be one of the most interesting in history. If Dempsey can defeat Fulton there is small-question of the ability of the Salt Lake boxer to at least outpoint Willard in ten rounds and thus force the title holder to a longer bout for the championship.
